Future Charts

Welcome to Module 4, Part 6, where we will be discussing future charts and how they play a role in reading the energetic signature through the methodology of Cosmic Design.

Future charts are very similar to birth charts or charts of the day. They are simply the energetic snapshot of a date in the future.

Now, this is a very important conversation to have because astrology historically has been linked to prediction and to psychic capacities. For our conversation and for our methodology of Cosmic Design, I would like to separate them slightly so that we get really clear on what the charts are doing versus what the individual who is reading the chart is doing.

So a future chart—again—is a snapshot of the energy of some moment in the future. We can forecast out a day, a week, a month, a year—we can even forecast out years in the future—to have an accurate identification of where the Sun, the Moon, and the planets will be.

Now, because we're using True Sky, we are using the technology that aligns us with the actual movement of the Sun, the Moon, and the planets. And so, as we forecast out, we can trust that that is going to represent where they actually are in the sky.

And this is important. Similar to the chart of a day or a birth chart, the actual placements of the Sun, the Moon, and the planets—and how they relate to the constellations—are going to give us the overarching energetic signature of the day, of the moment, of the future date that you are pulling. The energetic signature gives us the blueprint of the energetic architecture and waves—the way that things might be moving and the way that people might experience them.

This is different than psychic prediction. Psychic prediction is pulling information from the field about a specific timeline. It's much more narrative. It is much more in the conversation of “this will happen,” “this event will happen,” or “this information is necessary to guide you toward an experience.”

Through Cosmic Design, we are really focused on the energetic signature through the chart—not pulling psychic information directly from the chart. However, when we are working with Cosmic Design, our natural intuitive and psychic capacities come online. So we can utilize the charts of the day, the birth chart, or even the future chart to pull through channeled information.

However, it is not the chart that is giving the information. It is the chart that acts as a portal or an access point for the individual who is interpreting the chart to pull through psychic information.

So, future charts in Cosmic Design are not predictive—they are full of potential.

This notion of potential is aligned with how we read our charts, because again, we're reading the potential energetic signature of that moment. We are reading where the Sun, the Moon, and the planets will be on a future date.

Now, as we read that energetic potential, we might be able to tune into the timelines that are possible on that date—but tuning into timelines is much more of a psychic practice and less of an astrological or astronomical practice.

So, the chart acts as the access point—the portal—but the individual who is reading the chart is the one who is pulling through the psychic code.

If you remember back to our conversation about True Sky and traditional astrology, this is where I believe that traditional astrologers can still pull through accurate predictive code—or accurate code as it relates to the birth chart—even if they are reading different placements of the Sun, the Moon, and the planets.

It is not the chart that holds the psychic information. The psychic information exists in the shared field of consciousness—the Akashic Records—the place of multidimensional reality where all of the information is stored about all of the timelines.

When you are tuning into psychic information, that is what you are pulling from. The chart acts as the access point or the portal, but the information is coming from somewhere else.

So, traditional charts can still act as that catalyst, but they are reading different placements, and the information—psychically—comes from a different source. It doesn't come specifically from the chart.

This is really important. When we are pulling future charts through the methodology of Cosmic Design, we are leaning into the true placements of future dates. Those true placements of future dates give us the energetic signature of that date, and it is through that energetic signature that we can access more of the psychic or predictive information.

So, the difference here, in summary, is that the Cosmic Design future charts give us the blueprint of the potential future energy, and the predictive analysis or interpretation comes through the individual who is reading the chart from the shared field of consciousness.

So, as you're pulling future charts and trying to anticipate what might be coming, keep it in the realm of generalized information first. And then, if you feel ready, willing, and able to receive the psychic information, allow the chart to act as a portal.

As always, thank you so much for being here.
