FALL 2025

MODULE 3 Part 4 Bonus - AI Notes & Summary

Midpoint Dates and the Wheel of the Year

In this short bonus lecture, the true-sky midpoint dates for Gemini are revealed: June 18 through July 19. This correction significantly shifts our seasonal understanding, as traditional astrology assigns much of this period to Cancer. Within Cosmic Design, Gemini and Cancer are distinctly different energies—complementary yet unique in essence.

Gemini holds the anchor point of the Summer Solstice, just as Sagittarius holds the Winter Solstice. In the Northern Hemisphere, the high day of solstice in June occurs under the constellation of Gemini, symbolizing a sacred transition between light and dark, one season ending and another beginning. In the Southern Hemisphere, these polarities are reversed, yet the energetic mirror remains the same.

The solstice gateways—Sagittarius for Winter and Gemini for Summer—represent the two halves of the year, embodying the culmination and renewal of light. These are ancient ritual thresholds woven into human culture since antiquity, marking portals of transformation. Within Cosmic Design, they form an oppositional chord: Sagittarius as Truth and Seeking (December solstice) and Gemini as Trust and Experiencing (June solstice). Together, they harmonize as the First Chord of Consciousness, expressing the cyclical balance between revelation and embodiment.
